Polyester interlock is a soft and stretchy fabric commonly used in clothing, while PUL (polyurethane laminate) coating is a thin layer of waterproof material. When combined, they create a durable and waterproof fabric that's perfect for reusable cloth diapers. The interlock provides a comfortable and absorbent inner layer, while the PUL coating prevents leaks and messes from escaping.

Inner Cover Layer:

Tricot Fabric with moisture-wicking processing to create a high-quality and effective dry touch inner layer. Its durability and ease of care make it a practical choice for eco-conscious parents looking for long-lasting and sustainable diapering options.

Absorbent Insert:

Microfiber terry is a soft and highly absorbent fabric made from synthetic fibers. It's popularly used for making towels, bathrobes, and cleaning cloths. The microfiber construction provides a lightweight and quick-drying material
